

Best practice ideas collection

Best practice join the EAFA

Joining the European Alliance for Apprenticeships will give you the opportunity to networking with like-minded companies and schools and to join international events as participant or stakeholder.

Best practice idea: engage and get help form your Chamber of Commerce

• In Italy the Chambers do not have by law a role but we had very successfull experience in cooperating with them. Try it out to contact your local Chamber to see how they can help you.

Best practice idea: specialised team in contacting companies

 To select and train staff to contact companies, convince them to sart cooperating and to keep contact with them.

Best practice idea: training alliance

• To foster cooperation among the companies we're in contat with so that they can create a training alliance and cooperate to offer a better training experience to the students and to streamline and ease their work

Best practice idea: train the company tutor

• Even though in our countries there is not the standardise role of the in-company tutor it would be a good idea to offer a short training to the person in the company that will have the role to tutor the students.

Best practice idea: company's checklist

• To support the companies that start to cooperate with your organization considered preparing a checklist based on on country/local context to streamline the procedures and improve the experience for all the actors involved.

Best practice idea: pilot project in your city

• Get inspired by the DESI case study and contact 1-2 companies at local level to propose a similar project leveraging the visibility opportunity

Best practice idea: how to get worst activity

• Follow the staretgic problem solving approach, identify and start solving the problems that prevent your organization from increasing WBL and dual education.

Best practice idea: ambassadors and events

• Invite students/companies to events in which they can share their positive epxperience and inspire fellowa students/companies to participate in WBL and dual education.